Marco D'Eramo: American Decline?

Predictions of American decline have multiplied over the past half-century, in tandem with the country's expanding world power. Marco D'Eramo balances the strengths of a novel mode of dominion—military, financial, digital, diplomatic—against growing domestic strains levied by political deadlock and economic globalization.

Timothy Erik Ström: Capital and Cybernetics

Current debates on techno-capitalism often underplay the relative autonomy of the digital realm. Responding to Evgeny Morozov's 'Critique of Techno-Feudal Reason' in NLR 133/4, Timothy Ström outlines the abstractionist and expansionist logic of a novel cybernetic-capitalist form, originating at the apex of the US imperial system.

Julia Hertäg: Germany's Counter-Cinemas

Is a new dissident cinema emergent in Germany? In defiance of the glut of 'heritage' productions and navigating a stultifying state-funding bureaucracy, an inter-generational set of filmmakers working out of the Berlin School tradition interrogates the regional hegemon's past and present.

Daniel Finn: Challenge from the Peripheries

Comparative study of Sinn Féin and the SNP, theoretically the two principal opponents of the continuation of the present form of the UK state. What headaches do they cause its ruling parties?
